

*there are many roads
to go*

Sing-Out National

University of Dubuque

. . . . there are many roads to go and they go by many names. they all don't go the same way, but they get there all the same. all of the sing-out cast on stage this evening have come from many different roads to present this show as the climax of week-long activities centering around the ideas of building the individual as a leader on his own road. there are as many different ideas as there are people in the world and we have taken on as our task to provide a platform for those people who dares to care a little more can sing-out and speak out their concern. this vast melting pot of people and ideas are necessary in building the type of world where all can be as free as the wind to let his mind roam the plains of humanity.

to do this though, there must be a challenge. a challenge of myself to be open to the ideas of others, a challenge to honestly make decisions concerning these ideas, and finally a challenge to dare myself these ideas to my life.

if we can accept the task of growing greater in humanity toward one another we will find that the walls we build against each other are only in our minds. really what a day it will be, you'll be surprised who you will see, when the roads come together just up the way
